Supply Division would have some interest in the legislation. The impact would be more costs to CIA.

6 to Originator:

It appears that GSA is attempting to pass on to federal agencies certain direct and indirect costs associated with their current functions and absorbed by GSA in annual appropriations. Since those costs cannot be accurately identified, we must rely on GSA to fairly assess these values when transferring costs to us for utilization and disposal functions.

In those cases where sales proceeds would be returned to us, a charge will be deducted from such proceeds. Our current proceeds from sales amount to more than  Our concern is the amount of the charge, to be imposed at GSA's discretion. STAT

Although the proposed legislation is alleged to encourage competition, the procedure to purchase GSA items from non-GSA sources is undefined, i.e., what "simplified form" will be required to demonstrate lower cost and "how long" will be the rapid response to waiver requests.

The bottom line, as C/PD noted, is increased costs to customers.

The proposal brings a question to mind: If this proposal is accepted, can CIA and other federal agencies do likewise and assess a charge for services rendered?

Attached for your review and comment is a draft bill prepared by the General Services Administration. The bill would amend the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 so as to change the way in which GSA procures supplies for government agencies. It would also make some other changes in that Act. I would appreciate receiving your comments by Thursday, March 24, 1983 as the Office of Management and Budget has requested the Agency's comments by March 25, 1983.
